As a result of a visit to Washington a week ago Thursday by Supervisor George Smith of Shandaken and Martin B. Johnson, one of the old employes at the William Schwarzwaelder Company plant at Chichester, Congressman Lewis James H. Lewis, K. Rockefeller has become interested in the plight of the Chichester wood-working factory which is now being temporarily operated by Willis Rappelyea of Lexington. As a result of Mr. Rockefeller's activities there is a possibility that the plant may be continued in operation under the direction of the federal department of agriculture as a re-settlement administration project.

Survey Under Way

At present a survey is being made by a crew of federal foresters to determine whether there esters to determine whether there is sufficient timber in the territory to make it advisable for the federal government to finance the continuance of the factory as a re-settlement project. On the findings of the forestry men depends largely the outcome of the project which if approved would reopen the factory and place it in reopen the factory and place it in the hands of the workmen to operate under supervision of an assigned in the property of the supervision of an assigned in the supervision of the supe superintendent assigned superintendent would act for the government.

Bergdoll, whose exploits as an aviator and automobile racer earned him youthful fame in sporting circles, failed to respond when his draft number was called in 1917. For two years he dodged arrest but finally was captured by federal authorities in New York city. On March 17, 1920, he was convicted and sentenced to five years imprisonment.

Two months later he received permission to visit his mother in Philadelphia and en route escaped from his military guards. He then made his way to Germany.

A diplomatic incident developed subsequently when attempts by Americans in Germany to capture him led to the arrest and impris-onment of one of the Americans. The alien property custodian holds considerable cash, securities, mortgages and real estate seized at the time of Bergdoll's convic-

'Largest' Boy Scout In America Dies

DuBois, Pa., April 10 (49,... Sixteen-year-old Iread Spray Levendusky, whose 527 pounds made him the "largest" Boy Scout in the United States, is dead, a victim of pneumonia. Iread was a normal child weighing seven pounds at birth but glandular disturbance pushed his weight to 35 pounds at the age of three weeks.

When stricken ten days ago he was five feet eight inches tall and five feet eight inches around the waist.

The youth became known as "largest scout" just after his 12th birthday when he joined Bucktail Council while weighing just over 300 pounds. He entered high school in 1937 and made the football team. Last year he achieved the Eagle Scout rating.

Nearly the entire student body at nearby Forge High where Iread was a popular sophomore attended his funeral yesterday. Besides his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stock Levendusky, 11 brothers and sisters survive.

DAYLIGHT SAVING

Daylight saving time goes into effect in this city on Sunday, April 30, under the provisions of the daylight saving ordinance under the Canfield administration. Adopted as a World War measure, it proved so popular here that the ordinance has never been repealed.

The large cities pioneered the movement because it gave extra hours of daylight to thousands of workers. The popularity of the scheme then spread to smaller cities and to many of the villages. Although the movement to save daylight has spread in recent years, there is still confusion in a great many instances. Railroads and farmers are affected by the change in time. All communities do not adopt daylight saving and national time changes would complicate the situation were daylight saving to be used for railroad operation. If daylight saving were adopted universally this would remove the objection of the railroads. The farmers object to the plan because they must continue their operations according to the laws of nature and cannot make the dew dry up on daylight saving or the cows conform to the new ruling. There is also a disruption in the lives of children.

There still will be confusion as long as we have the two time systems but there are sensible features of the man-made time system that appeal to every one. The daily saving of an additional hour of daylight to an individual may not amount to much but the aggregate is what counts and proves the value of the plan. There is another feature whose value cannot be overestimated and that is the opportunity which the plan provides to the indoor worker for additional outdoor exercise. The benefits to health cannot be estimated in dollars and cents, but the health of anyone who works is his greatest asset.

MEDDLING IN SOUTH AMERICA

It seems that our statesmen and publicists were unduly worried about the danger of Latin-America yielding to subversive influence from Old World dictatorships. In two instances especially, involving the two biggest and most powerful countries in South America, the Nazis and Fascists have burned their fingers by awkward meddling.

First there was Brazil, the United States of the southern hemisphere, which was so annoyed by Nazi propaganda that it met our government half way in arranging a broad plan of economic cooperation and cultural exchanges.

Argentina was a harder nut to crack. At the Lima conference it seemed to block every effort made by our representatives for continental cooperation. It was naturally susceptible to Nazi-Fascist influences, because there are so many Italians and such heavy German investments in Argentina.

But the Nazis were not content to let well enough alone. They seem to have been so rash as to push a scheme for taking over southern Patagonia. It is a bleak region sparsely inhabited, and probably not worth much, but the Argentine people and government quickly made it clear that they didn't want any European power entrenched there. As a result, Nazi influence in Argentina is down about to

There have been blunders almost as bad in some of the other Latin-American countries. Uncle Sam is probably more influential thereabouts than ever before.

DISTINGUISHED PUBLIC SERVICE

Eighteen city employes, who had driven vehicles without accident for five years, were honored last week by the Kingston Kiwanis Club. These safety awards for drivers of motor vehicles produce good results and should be continued not only by municipalities but by industries as well.

Several factors are combined in attaining the achievement and meriting the award. Drivers must be intelligent and careful. The vehicles they operate must be in good repair. Traffic regulations in the areas, where their business lies, must be sensible to begin with. honestly supported by the drivers, and honestly enforced by the police. With these different elements in force, weather becomes a minor influence, readily overcome, and safe operation is the rule.

The awarding of medals for distinguished public service has brought forth many in- TURN ABOUT IS FAIR PLAY teresting accounts throughout the country. For example, there was the health department inspector who went to a farm and lay in the grass all night watching to catch a farmer watering milk with a garden hose. Another is an obscure clerk who worked out an efficient new office routine which saved the city $1,200 a year.

There may be many intelligent public servants, who use their brains for the community's good, but who go unrecognized and unrewarded. It would be good for indifferent citizens to hear more about them and to join the public appreciation of them.

SURPLUS WHEAT

The Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation is reported as selling wheat at 381/2 to 40 cents a bushel, for shipment to Germany and other countries, while American buyers have been paying 70 cents a bushel at Chicago.

Perhaps it is necessary for such a governmental agency, overloaded with wheat as a result of bumper crops, to unload a lot of it somehow, though at a considerable loss. And we need not make a very big fuss about it going to Germany—if it is going into bread for hungry people and not into military storage for a campaign of conquest.

At the same time, if our surplus wheat must be sold below cost of production, isn't there some way by which a lot of it may go to provide bread more liberally for our own people? There must be millions of Americans who would eat more wheat, and other grains too, if they could get them.

It was the twenty min-utes spent in patient listening to this worried pat-ient that enabled the physician to help him.

A busy physician with but two hours to see eight or twelve patients may not have time to listen to this type of patient but, in most cases, after an examination, asks the patient to return. To try be resented by the patient.

Dr. I. Rodis, Washington, D. C., in 'Medical Annals District of Columbia' makes some excellent suggestions to physicians when these nervous or neurotic patients consult them.

Do not be in a hurry with a neurotic individual. It may be that he has wrestled with himself for many hours before deciding to tell the whole story to the physician. If the physician hasn't time to listen, he will not help this patient.

"Do not neglect to perform a thorough exam-

"Do not hesitate to ask your patients about their married or domestic life. Do not attempt to argue or reason a patient out of his symptoms or beliefs. Try to find the cause of the symptoms. Do not make decisions for your patient. Let him talk but try to guide his thoughts into proper channels and he will likely see his own way out of his diffi-

I believe the patient should also read over these suggestions. It should help him to talk freely and fully about himself.

The American form of government is supposed to be so rigid that, for emergency purposes, the custom has arisen of delegating complete powers in foreign policy matters to the discretion of the President of the United States. But a study of what can be done without change in the American constitutional system which will nevertheless what can be done without change in the American constitutional system which will nevertheless enable the United States to act quickly and yet avoid a one-man decision and give due regard to public sentiment leads to the coaclusion that the flexibility needed can be obtained if the principle of a bi-partisan commission is applied with the cooperation of the executive.

Study of Taxes To Be Made Here

Local Group Is Organized to Probe Hidden Fees

A nation-wide women's tax study movement spread to Kingston today with the announcement of the formation of a local unit of the National Consumers Tax Commission under the leadership of Mrs. Harry B. Walker, of 478

Broadway.

"It is through such non-political groups as this," said Mrs. Kenneth C. Frazier, NCTC president who announced the appointment, "that the women of America can best study the problem of hidden taxes. Most of us are unaware we pay these taxes but they add $10 to every $30 of rent, $1.95 to a $5 hat, and $1.56 to a $4 pair of the pays of the pay the women of America can best

The NCTC vice president is Mrs. Melvin Mucklestone, a past Mrs. Meivin Mucklestone, a past national president of the Amer-ican Legion Auxiliary. The drive in this state is led by Mrs. Charles J. Reeder, of Carthage, the com-mission's New York national committee member.

Hidden taxes are a real burden on low-income families," ex-plained Mrs. Mucklestone. "They account for 63 per cent of all tax revenues raised by, local state and national governments. They mean higher prices on all food, clothing, fuel, rent and other liv-ing essentials. Too often the result that low-income families have to forego actual necessities."

Scapanus Largest Mole On American Continent

Scapanus is the largest mole on the American continent. He is blood brother to the lesser moles of the eastern states and of Europe. His fine bluish fur is the equal of that of his European relatives, but he differs widely from moles of the East and of Europe in his feeding habits,

Their food consists entirely of angleworms, adult burrowing insects and their larvae. Scapanus eats all of these greedily. When they are scarce he turns vegetarian and eats oats, wheat, corn, beans, peas, vetch, carrots, potatoes, parsnips, bulbous iris, tulips and tigridias.

according to an authority in the Portland Oregonian.

He spends his entire life underground in a marvelously excavated system of burrows known as "runs." He is, therefore, in darkness. Consequently all his experiences come to him through his sense of touch, his acute hearing and his highly developed sense of smell. He will have nothing whatever to do with any object the least bit unfamiliar or that is out of place.

Scapanus' time is divided between roaming existing runs in search of food and in digging new runs to greener pastures. All this digging gives him his tremendous power. His strength is so great that he almost literally "swims" through the earth, using a modified breast stroke.

Mahogany Richer With Age

One of the outstanding qualities of mahogany is that the wood gradually becomes deeper and richer with age. If one were satisfied to let time effect this change, there would be no need for stains. However, in this age of baste we cannot wait for time to develop the rich, soft pa-ting that is the earmark of the antique. The fresh cut surfaces of most woods are fairly light in color. Mahogany may be a light salmon pink or sometimes a creamy yellowish brown. Lumber cut from different trees of the same variety and of the same cargo may vary somewhat in color. Staining therefore not only tends to give the desired color but also tends to equalize variations in different boards or differences between boards and veneers. One of the essentials of good cabinet making is the selection of wood of the same kind that matches the color, thus facilitating uniform staining. Thus we see that staining brings out the natural beauty of the wood. It imparts to the wood the rich mellow color that would otherwise come with years of exposure to light. It makes uniform the various parts of a piece of furniture.

Study of Taxes To Be Made Here

Local Group Is Organized to Probe Hidden Fees

A nation-wide women's tax study movement spread to Kingston today with the announcement of the formation of a local unit of the National Consumers Tax Commission under the leadership of Mrs. Harry B. Walker, of 478

"It is through such non-political groups as this," said Mrs. Kenneth C. Frazier, NCTC president who announced the appointment, "that the women of America can best study the problem of hidden taxes. Most of us are unaware we pay these taxes but they add $10

Mahogany Richer With Age

One of the outstanding qualities of mahogany is that the wood gradually becomes deeper and richer with age. If one were satisfied to let time effect this change, there would be no need for stains. However, in this age of haste we cannot wait for time to develop the rich, soft patina that is the earmark of the antique. The fresh cut surfaces of most woods are fairly light in color. Mahogany may be a light salmon pink or sometimes a creamy yellowish brown. Lumber cut from different trees of the same variety and of the same cargo may vary somewhat in color. Staining therefore not only tends to give the desired color but also tends to equalize variations in different boards or differences between boards and veneers. One of the essentials of good cabinet making is the selection of wood of the same kind that matches the color, thus facilitating uniform staining. Thus we see that staining brings out the natural beauty of the wood. It imparts to the wood the rich mellow color that would otherwise come with years of exposure to light. It makes uniform the various parts of a piece of furniture.

Tests for Diamonds

The common tests for diamonds is the file, which will cut imitations but not a real diamond. A drop of water on the face of a diamond, moved about with the point of a pin, will retain its globular form; immersed in water the diamond will shine and be distinctly visible. An aluminum pencil makes a mark on a real diamond that is easily removed by rubbing; on an imitation the mark remains after rubbing. These are a few simple tests; others are based on specific gravity, hardness, refraction and dispersion of light, etc.

"Gun license, huh? Who issued

"I did," Jeff said. "She told me she was scared to death up here in the hollow sometimes, there were awful sounds. I could see the sense of it, so I gave it to her. Edwards was sick that week, and with everybody so busy about this Old Home Week, I did all the red tape Home Week, I did all the red tape myself. She said she wanted to get herself a little gun. I asked if she could shoot—it always seems rather futile to me to give permits to people who can't. They do far more damage than good. Anyway, she said she was being taught by an expert, and she was picking up."

"Who was the expert?"

"Zeb, I thought. Under the circumstances, she probably meant Slade. He's done a lot of shooting ever since he came to town." Jeff looked curiously at Kay. "What have you been doing to the girl, Asey? She looks exhausted."

He cut short her stories of the draw heavish the problem.

day and brought up the problem of Amos, the black dog, and his lost license tag.

It appeared, finally, that Amos had lost his tag, though Mrs. Brin-ley was sure she didn't know why Mr. Mayo cared. She, Mrs. Brinley, had put on his last year's tag, that was all, because everyone knew they were honest people, and the records would show they had paid the fee anyway, and what with Arthur being a selectman, it seemed the best way out, and it was little things like dog fees, wasn't it, and three cent postage, and the gas tax, and gracious only knew what others, that all made life so hard. The question of where Mr. Brinley was during the stuck ferris wheel episode was harder to get anywhere with. Mrs. Brinley frankly confessed that she had mever spent such a time in her life, and was too terrified to look over, anyway, and what would have happened if the thing had collapsed. Mrs. Brinley for one hated think think the continued was to the continued was a such as the continued was too terrified to look over, and was too terrified to look over himself away. Outside the post office he met Lane.

"No one seems to know where Brinley was," he told Asey. "I've asked all the people with badges, claiming I thought I'd given one of them my glasses to hold while I went on the merry-go-round, and maybe it was Mr. Brinley, but I hadn't been able to find him. Of course they all said they was there Monday night, but I hadn't given them any glasses to hold, and on delving into the matter, not one of them remembered seeing Brinley there. Now what?"

"THAT dishes that," Lane said.
"Asey, Mike Slade couldn't have—oh, I forgot. You've got him placed uptown, haven't you? Her other boy friend was with you. She couldn't have done it and been back here by the time you and Zeb—look, did you know it all the time?"

"He's smug, almost," Kay said. "How did you know, Asey?"

He walked over to meet them. "This is Jeff's contribution,"
Sara passed over a piece of paper,
"but I thought of asking him about it. Anyway, this is, a copy of the notation. Jeff gave her the permit himself."

Asey read through the sentences which announced that Jane Warren had, two weeks before, been given permission to carry a gun, "For defense of self and property."
"Gun license, huh? Who issued

"I did," Jeff said. "She told me she was scared to death up here in the hollow sometimes, there were awful sounds. I could see the sense of it, so I gave it to her. Edwards was sick that week, and with everybody so busy about this Old Home Week, I did all the red tape myself. She said she wanted to get herself a little gun. I asked if she could shoot—it always see ms could shoot—it always seems rather futile to me to give permits to people who can't. They do far more damage than good. Anyway, she said she was being taught by an expert, and she was picking ""

"Who was the expert?"

"Zeb, I thought. Under the circumstances, she probably meant Slade. He's done a lot of shooting ever since he came to town." Jeff looked curiously at Kay. "What have you been doing to the girl, Asey? She looks exhausted."

"She is," Asey said. "Take her along with you. I got to do some putterin' around, an' she's chatterin' wet again. Look after her."

Kay made no protest. "It's not that I'm tired of detecting," she explained to Asey, "but I'm going to leave the concrete detail to you for a while."

Asey grinned and went back to Asey grinned and went back to Lane.

"Well," he said, "here's where she got a permit to carry a gun, which she can't deny. Legal sort of step for anyone contemplatin' murder, ain't it? She's got a shoulder bruise that might of come from a gun kickin', but she says cellar steps. She bought a gun, an' Slade says she gave it to him an' someone stole it. Turns up in the pond, but Jane couldn't have stuck it there on Monday night, an' with you here or one of your men, I which she can't deny. I ANE shrugged. "You tell me. I to all the was just as odd when I was young, but it doesn't seem to me that I could have been, possibly. I know I wasn't."

"If what folks say is true," Asey told her, "you had Jeff Leach on his ear, an' forty-seven others practically in the asylum. An' you worry about Jane with two! Well, look out for'em all."

It appeared, finally, that Amos had lost his tag, though Mrs. Brinley was sure she didn't know why Mr. Mayocared. She, Mrs. Brinley, had put on his last year's tag, that was all, because everyone knew they were honest people, and the records would show they had paid the fee anyway, and what with Arthur being a selectman, it seemed thur being a selectman, it seemed the best way out, and it was little things like dog fees, wasn't it, and three cent postage, and the gas tax, and gracious only knew what others, that all made life so hard.

Asey got up and hunted out Sara, and tried to impress on her the necessity of being careful.

Traffic Charges Aired in Court

One Driver Pays $2 Fine, Another Forfeits Bail

Three arrests for traffic violations were made over the weekend by the police department. Germano Serino of Poughkeepsie was arrested for failure to produce his driving license on the demand of an officer. This morning he produced the license and he was discharged when arraigned before Judge Cabill in police Elmira Bowlers court. Serino explained that he had left his operator's license in his other suit of clothes.

Attwood Trapnew of Metter, Ga., was arrested for parking his truck in the center of the street, and also for not having a chauf-feur's license. He forfeited $10 cash bail when he failed to appear in answer to the charges in police
